What is Prosthodontics?

Prosthodontics is replacement of missing tooth structure, missing teeth and the associated soft and hard tissues by prostheses (fillings, crowns, bridges, dentures) which may be fixed or removable, or may be supported and retained by implants. It is the sub-speciality of Restorative Dentistry which deals with the restoration of diseased, injured, or abnormal teeth to normal function. It aims to restore the mouth to healthy oral function and appearance.

The specialist lists enable patients to identify registered dentists who have met certain requirements and have been given the right to be titled 'Specialist' by the General Dental Council. Prosthodontics is 1 of 13 specialist lists held by the council. A registered (with the GDC) specialist in Prosthodontics will have completed an approved specialist training programme and developed advanced knowledge, skills in providing highest level of patient care. Treatment goal is to restore the health, optimal function and appearance of your teeth and in doing so, help you to maintain your teeth for as long as possible and reduce the need for dental treatment in the future.

Akit provides a wide range of general dental care alongside the following specialist services and also takes referrals from dentists who require advanced restorative treatment for their patients.

We encourage communication from referring dentists and you can download referral forms from the "Referrals" section of either of our websites:
